

Hollow Peak — Q3 Board Pack

Executive summary

Revenue held steady through the quarter while the cost of running the service fell for the third month in a row. Two large accounts renewed early, and support load per customer is down about a fifth from Q2. The renewal cliff in January is still the number that matters most; nothing this quarter changes that outlook.

Hosting cost per active folder

Active folder count is now the denominator that matters — it keeps shrinking even as raw hosting spend holds flat.

What to watch

The August figure is still provisional until the last invoice clears. Nobody has checked whether the chart colours survive being printed.
